Adriana's Story

I was born with hydrocephalus.

When i was born i had to be transferred from one hospital to another hospital that specializes in Hydrocephalus & neurosurgery. During that trip from one hospital to the next, i fell in to a comma. Knowing that they could not perform the surgery in the state that i was in, the doctors tried to revive me. The last moment they were about to pull the plugs & give up, I woke up (note- neither my parents nor my family saw me during this, the doctors only told my parents that they had to run a few tests on me)

After they knew i was awake they alerted the doctors and went back to my parents & told them I had Hydrocephalus.

Immediately the docs gave my parents the whole "your child cant walk or talk..." speech. I FINALLY got my surgery to get the shunt put in.

20 years later i live a FAIRLY normal life, YES! i have had a few hardships traveling down the wrong path. I love singing & dancing & watching tv. I love ALL kinds of music.
